WESTERLY AND VICINITY

Death of Calvin S. Thurber—Speedy Horse Purchased at Old Glory Sale—Gift to Cyrus H. Brown on His 80th Birthday.

Many friends of Cyrus Henry Brown, who resides with his wife, the wife of ex-Governor George H. Utter, in High street, called Wednesday to tender congratulations on his 80th birthday. Reception was held at the residence, served from 4 in the afternoon until 9 in the evening. Mr. Brown is a descendant of Calvin Baptist church and many of the members called upon him in the evening. The surprise came when Rev. F. C. Jones, pastor of Calvary church, in behalf of the church and Sunday school, presented Mr. Brown an ebony gold-headed cane suitably inscribed.

The disposal of James Butler's East View farm trotting horses was a feature of the Old Glory sale of horses at Madison Square Garden, New York, on Wednesday. William S. Aldrich of Westerly purchased Direct Finish, a son of Direct-Rose Lad, for $400. Flying Feet, a 5 year old, with a trial time of 2:10, was sold to J. J. Ryan of Calverton, Pa., for $1,575, while Oil, said to be the best bred son of Axworthy-Alma Vista, by Direct, went to J. E. Whitsett of Corsicana, Tex., for $775.

Calvin S. Thurber, who after the death of his wife, about two months ago, moved to Warren to reside with his sister, died there Tuesday. Mr. Thurber came to Westerly forty-five years ago, engaged in the electrical graph business and also made fine paintings, some of which have a place in the Memorial building. He worked at carpentering for a while, but his last employment was in the office of the South Granite company. The body will be brought to Westerly for burial.

Gideon Thornton Collins died Tuesday morning at his home near Noyes in his 83d year. He served in the town council, part of the time as president, for twenty-three consecutive years. All the town officers who served with him in 1869 are dead except James W. Sullivan, now of Providence, who was town moderator, and Horace Vanhook, a constable. Mr. Collins was a member of the council, in conjunction with the selectmen of Stonington, the Broad street bridge was built across the Pawcatuck river in 1885. William B. Austin and Albert H. Spicer are the only surviving members of that council and George D. Stanton is the only selectman now living who was a member of the board of 1882. Mr. Collins was active in agricultural affairs and was for many years an officer of the Washington County Agricultural society. He was a deacon of the Seventh-day Baptist church and for many years a member of the board of managers of the Seventh-day Baptist Missionary society.

Mr. Collins was born in Hopkinton and he is survived by Mrs. Collins and a brother Alfred, who resides in Charleston, R. I.

There is probably no section of any town where overhanging signs predominate than in the business part of Westerly, and this fact was perhaps no more fully realized, with the attendant dangers, than during the severe northeast storm of Wednesday and the somewhat subsided storm of Thursday, and the result may be the passage of an ordinance that will make these signs illegal and their consequent removal. While these signs of the swinging sort were sent violently back and forth, tugging at the buildings only one happened to fall and came within a foot of striking a young woman, and an accident, perhaps a fatality, was narrowly averted. These signs have been abolished in other towns without injury to the business.

The new building is near the waiting station of the Groton-Stoughton trolley road and will be devoted entirely to social purposes.

Elisabeth Ammonkoob, a native of West Africa, who has just arrived in this country to prepare for missionary work in his home land, under the direction of the Seventh-day Baptist Missionary society, attended a meeting of the society in Westerly Wednesday.

He will go to Tuskegee for a time and then study in some school of the Seventh-day Baptist denomination.

The liquor case of the town of Westerly against Oliver E. Gavitt has been disposed of upon payment of costs. It was plain that there was not a strong case against Gavitt, yet he considered it economical to settle rather than have the case continued and the costs increased. The case against Thomas A. Barber was also disposed of upon payment of costs, which amounted to $550. It is said that Gavitt's expenses will be about $200.

The promenade of the junior class of the Westerly High school in the Dixon house Thursday night was a successful social event and up to the usual standard of these annual but ever-changing functions. The affair was arranged by a committee composed of Catherine R. Brown, Leona J. Kenyon, Anna Peckham, Agnes V. Roche, W. Russell Dower and William C. Quinn, with Joseph P. Howard as the efficient chairman. Prof. and Mrs. James H. Swain were the patron and patroness, and the music was by the ideal orchestra.
